THE CONCEPT OF AN ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE FOR THE IMPLEMENTATION OF AN ARTIFICIAL PLANET CONSTRUCTION PROJECT.

Creation of an artificial planet as one of the most large-scale and complex projects. Therefore, it is necessary to create a special coordinating organization with a vast number of branches and sub-organizations.

I. Committee

Let's create an organization with a hierarchy.The supreme body is the Committee.
The Committee has the following functions:

1. Analysis and formulation of interim results on the project's progress.
2. Formulating the general direction of development for each organization. (These are advisory in nature).
3. Ensuring stable communication and providing a platform for project discussions for every organization.
4. Declaration of the project's minimum overall budget.

5. Acting as the official communication channel with the external audience.

6. Registration of new organizations and advisory discussion of an organization's powers.

Note 1:
Every organization is obliged to submit an application for registration to the committee.The Committee and the main organization discuss the basic powers and rights of the organization.

7. Consulting and assisting in legal matters (upon request from organizations).

Note 2:
If possible,organizations can independently turn to third partiesfor resolving legal issues.

8. Organizing events and supporting the existence of the project and the organizations within it. Determining the effectiveness of each organization.

II. Organizations of the First Order

Next, let's create Organizations of the First Order. Organizations of the First Order are the main executive structures of the project,responsible for achieving one of the fundamental, system-forming goals of the project, without which the main concept of the project cannot be realized.

For the creation of a Fabric Planet, several Organizations of the First Order can be established, dealing with the following areas:
–Logistics
–Infrastructure
–Energy Consumption
–Security
–Management
As well as other organizations responsible for creating the planet itself(for example, an organization for gravity, location, resource allocation, and others).

Organizations of the First Order possess the following rights and powers:

1. Representation of lower-level organizations before the Committee.
2. Decision-making on the rights and powers of organizations within their structure, on equal terms with the Committee.
3. The right to free and stable communication with the Committee and other Organizations of the First Order.
4. Discussion with other Organizations of the First Order regarding the recommended direction of the project's and organizations' work.
5. Have the final right to approve organizations related to their competencies.
6. Have the right to approve an unlimited number of lower-level organizations.

Lower-level organizations are those that perform a specific task and are part of another organization.

Organizations of the First Order are not part of the Committee, as both entities are part of the Supreme Organizations.

III. Rules and Questions

The rights of supreme organizations to create structure do not affect the practical initiatives of lower-level organizations, i.e., supreme organizations do not have the right to block grassroots initiatives, for example, conducting an experiment, searching for resources, and other actions.

The entire organization is built on the principles of cooperation and solidarity (workers' and international), autonomy of organizations, developed communications among organizations of various levels and competencies, fair rights and responsibilities for each organization, and minimal interference from bureaucracy.

This work presents an approximate structure, rights, and powers of the main organizations.

It requires revision due to a large number of unresolved issues:

–How to prevent competition for power between Organizations of the First Order and the Committee?
–Who forms the composition of the governing bodies?
–What rights do lower-level organizations have? How to prevent powerlessness before higher authorities?

–Is it possible to change the basic principles of the organization? Who has the right to do this?

–Who and how has the right to communicate with the audience?

–Where does the budget come from, how is it established?

And other questions.
